

My local broadcast of K-LOVE is important to me as a community member because it provides me a choice of stations other than public radio or commercial. I am blessed by the music of K-LOVE, but more importantly, it is a representation of the freedom we enjoy as protected by the First Amendment to our Constitution. If replaced by a local LPFM broadcast, our community would lose an important connection to other communities in our nation and the world. When I listen to K-LOVE and my son listens to K-LOVE in his Air Force squadron and others in Bagdad listen, we are all listening to the same broadcast being edified by the exact same content and are joined together by this one web/broadcast. K-LOVE's broadcast serves each of its local communities as already outlined above, but indepent research shows that those who are "spiritual" are happier and commit fewer crimes and are less dependent on social system. These, although secular and measurable, are overshadowed by K-LOVE's most significant benefit to the local community--the communication of God's message through music and encouragement. This is protected by our Constitution and, therefore, should be protected by all government regulatory entities.
